Broken Heart Syndrome Is Real

New science seems to show that you really can die from a broken heart:

“Broken heart syndrome isn’t just Valentine’s Day hyperbole. It’s an actual medical condition, also known as stress-induced cardiomyopathy.

In broken heart syndrome, extreme stress brings on heart attack-like symptoms, such as chest pain and shortness of breath. This isn’t just an anxiety attack. The heart is actually in serious distress. At times, the person may experience irregular heartbeats or cardiogenic shock—a condition in which a suddenly weakened heart can’t pump enough blood to meet the body’s demands. In rare cases, broken heart syndrome can even lead to death.”

When it comes to our relationship with God, a broken heart doesn't take you a step closer to death, but a step closer to life ... spiritual life that is. God wants our spirits to mourn our own sinfulness the way we would mourn the loss of a loved one.

Matthew 5:4

“Blessed are those who mourn, for they will be comforted.

For the Christ follower, the burden of sin should always bring us to a place of stress within our spirit that drives us to genuine repentance. From that place of brokenness, God forgives, heals, and restores.

I love you all,

Tim
